As news broke Tuesday about an NHL game in Halifax this September between the Carolina Hurricanes and New York Islanders, many wondered if star forward John Tavares would be on Scotiabank Centre ice.

Islanders general manager Garth Snow made no promises.

"We don't make our line-ups until the days leading up to the games," Snow said via conference call for the announcement Tuesday in Halifax.

"If you look at our track record of pre-season games in Canada, we usually for the most part put our (best) team on the ice," Snow added.

Snow and Hurricanes general manager Ron Francis called in to speak about the Sept. 26 game with Scott Ferguson of Trade Centre Ltd. and John Graham of On Ice Management.

The Islanders are one of the up-and-coming teams in the NHL, led by Tavares. Carolina's lineup includes Eric Staal, Jordan Staal and defenceman Justin Faulk.

"They're a young team, they're an exciting team. Go back and look at the Olympics — Tavares. Look at the world juniors — Tavares," Graham told reporters of New York.

The Islanders last played in Halifax in 2008. It will be the Hurricanes' first appearance.

Ferguson said this will also be the first major hockey event at the newly named Scotiabank Centre, and fans might feel as if they're walking into a new arena in September with 10,000 new seats, expanded concession area and booths, and bathrooms will be in place.

Hockey Day events 'real celebration' for Halifax

Sports. Clinics, NHL stars, Stanley Cup sightings going across region until Saturday

HALEY RYAN

Hockey fever hits Halifax over the next few days as NHL alumni, TV personalities and the Stanley Cup descend on the city — but for one Olympian, it's really a "celebration of the community."

Scotiabank Hockey Day in Canada lands in Halifax for the first time ever Wednesday, with events and clinics going on until Saturday, when Ron MacLean will host various televised NHL games live from the Emera Oval.

"It's a real celebration of the community and what it's done for the game," former Team Canada captain and three-time Olympic medallist Cassie Campbell-Pascall said Tuesday.

Campbell-Pascall said she has been participating in Hockey Day in Canada events since 2006 and loves the grassroots community aspect that shows "what the game truly is about" and working with minor hockey players.

"It's about having fun and ... celebrating teammates and how important that aspect is not just in hockey but I think in everyone's life," Campbell-Pascall said.

"It seems kind of all warm and fuzzy, and I think sometimes we need to be."

Her favourites: getting out on the ice with girls' teams and the Hot Stove event, in which kids can speak up and talk to NHL alumni.

"They ask the best questions," she said with a laugh.

Gordon Brost, Scotiabank vice-president for southwest

Nova Scotia, said the events create a bond with hockey teams around the province.

"It's really an experience that will continue to resonate in their minds for a long time," he said.

The events touch other aspects of life for the person who is not a sports fan, Campbell-Pascall said, such as the novelty of a big concert, speeches and national exposure.

"Showcase your spirit for Halifax, get out and enjoy it and be proud of it, kind of pump your chest on national television, if you will," she said.

Crime. Car clocked going 226 km/h on highway

A man from Nova Scotia could be stuck with a fine worth more than $2,000 after he was caught driving 126 kilometres an hour over the speed limit Monday morning, RCMP say.

RCMP officers with the traffic services unit were conducting routine traffic enforcement on Highway 104 near the Telford area between New Glasgow and Antigonish when they saw a car travelling way over the speed limit on Monday around 5:30 a.m.

Officers' radar clocked the vehicle going at 226 km/h in a 100 km/h zone, despite the fact road conditions were slippery, with patches of ice and snow in some areas due to flurries.

"It's unbelievable," said RCMP spokesman Cpl. Mark Kellock on Tuesday, explaining that given the icy road conditions, he's never known a driver to take a gamble quite like that before.

He called the situation "an accident waiting to happen," saying that even when roads are dry that level of speed is dangerous.

A 28-year-old man from Sydney driving a Chevrolet Malibu — a rental vehicle — was stopped and charged with stunt driving. His rental vehicle was then towed and impounded for seven days.

"He didn't think he was going that fast," Kellock said, explaining the man told officers he was running late.

MLAs face prospect of pay cuts, premier says

Budget deliberations. But civil servants need not worry about wages, says McNeil

Report

A panel report released last April in Nova Scotia did not recommend any changes to salaries for members nor top-ups given to party leaders and the premier.

The possibility of pay cuts for Nova Scotia politicians is part of deliberations for the spring budget, Premier Stephen McNeil said Tuesday.

"We are looking at the entire fiscal envelope," said McNeil. "As we build our budget, we will look at all options."

But McNeil said civil servants will not see their wages reduced, adding that the government is in contract negotiations with several bargaining units and not looking at any salary rollbacks.

"I made a commitment that I will be looking for a wage pattern that I can afford to pay on a go-forward basis, but I will not be retroactively going back on civil servants," he said.

On Monday, New Brunswick Premier Brian Gallant said he and members of his cabinet will have their ministerial salaries reduced as of April 1 until the province's books are balanced.

That move will see Gallant's salary fall to $152,150 from $164,000. Cabinet ministers will have their earnings drop to $132,253 from $137,614.

Gallant's announcement was followed by a call from Nova Scotia's Progressive Conservative Leader Jamie Baillie for McNeil to follow suit.

The Opposition leader said a pay reduction for members of the Nova Scotia legislature is in order at a time when the public is being warned of tough fiscal measures ahead to bring down the deficit, which is forecast to be $220.6 million this fiscal year.

"He's the one asking every other Nova Scotian to tighten their belt," Baillie said. "I believe in the principle that we should all be in this together."

Members of the Nova Scotia legislature receive a base salary of $89,235.

The premier makes an additional indemnity of $112,791, bringing his salary to $202,026, while cabinet ministers receive an additional indemnity of $49,047.

Community. New Internet radio station continues to uncover 'amazing stories' after getting its start at Gottingen 250 Festival

STEPHANIE TAYLOR
stephanie.taylor@metronews.ca

What began as a week-long project has transformed into what some in Halifax's North End are saying means "everything" to their community.

Jourdin Symonds is the station manager at GotAVoiceRadio — a new Internet radio station produced at Centreline Studios, located in one of the upper rooms at the Uniacke Centre for Community Development along Gottingen Street.

Standing in the small one-room studio, next to a desk with a laptop, sound mixing board and lone microphone, the 23-year-old explains the idea for creating a community radio station.

It was meant to be a place where local volunteers, particularly teens, could record personal stories from different people in the neighbourhood, intended as a one-off project for the Gottingen 250 Festival last September.

However, it seemed they were onto something bigger than anyone could have imagined.

"It seems like ever since I started doing this, my life has been like a little bit more positive," Symonds explained Tuesday, saying he's watched a number of the young people involved find more direction in their lives, including making decisions to finish high school and pursue broadcasting.

"It basically lets our voices be heard worldwide," he said.

On Thursday evening, the radio station will officially launch with a party at The Bus Stop Theatre in the hopes of raising money to purchase more equipment.

Charlene Gagnon is director of operations at iMOVE (In My Own Voice), the organization heading up the project, and said after the initial broadcast, the community was just blown away to hear their own stories told in their own voices.

"It was very meaningful to both the people who participated, but also the people who tuned in who were interested in learning more about the North End," she said.

"Amazing, amazing stories."

Last December the program was moved online, streaming on a 24-7 basis "to test out the bugs," she explained, adding that close to 500 hours of interviews have been recorded.

Listeners can hear everything from local music to interviews with different members of the area's non-profits, such as a nutritionist from the North End Community Health Centre and a co-ordinator from CeaseFire to discuss violence, she said.

For example, people tuning in Tuesday morning could listen to four black teens talk about issues of stereotyping.

"It was all very raw and real," Gagnon said.

Health-care group wants province to stop charging ambulance fees

A patient advocacy group in Nova Scotia is calling on the province to eliminate all ambulance fees, which they believe will save more than $9 million per year and lead to longer-term savings.

The Nova Scotia Citizens' Health Care Network says that currently one in four Atlantic Canadians are deterred by the high cost of ambulance rides, which negatively impacts their health care.

The group's advocacy around ambulance fees comes in the wake of an investigation by CBC's Marketplace, which found that 19 per cent of Canadians are dissuaded from calling ambulances due to their cost.

In a release issued Tuesday, the group reports that the province's Emergency Health Services billed patients $12.2 million for 141,000 ambulance trips in 2013-14, when they expected to collect only $9.7 million.

They explained that every year, the agency estimates 20 per cent of bills will go unpaid, and last year waived $575,00 in fees for low-income patients and spent around $856,00 to offset the cost for nursing-home residents and those with limited mobility.

The provincial co-ordinator of the health network said that eliminating ambulance fees altogether would mean bigger savings than the subsidies and low-income waivers currently offered.

Police. Cabinet minister alleges Mountie made inappropriate comment

Nova Scotia RCMP say a member of the force is being investigated after a complaint was received from a provincial cabinet minister.

Sgt. Al LeBlanc says police got a call Monday from Community Services Minister Joanne Bernard alleging that a Mountie made an inappropriate comment to her and a member of her staff during a phone conversation at her constituency office.

LeBlanc wouldn't reveal details about the comment or the officer allegedly involved, but says the Mounties have launched an internal investigation.

Bernard issued a statement saying she had concern with the conduct of an individual who contacted her office and identified themselves as a member of the RCMP.

She says she then contacted police.

The city's newest ferry will bear the name of a local man killed in the line of duty.

On Tuesday, the city announced Craig Blake was chosen as the name for the new ferry, after 11,000 votes were cast in a contest over a two-week period in January.

Petty Officer Second Class Craig Blake was the first Canadian sailor to be killed in the line of duty in Afghanistan, according to a release. He belonged to an elite navy group, based at the Fleet Diving Unit Atlantic in Halifax, that specializes in neutralizing bombs.

More than 500 names were submitted last fall during the first phase of the contest, which was then narrowed down to six finalists by a selection committee.

The other finalists were: Vincent Coleman: The hero who sacrificed his own life to Walter Fitzgerald: A long-time educator and former mayor of Halifax.

Ruth Goldbloom: Co-founded the Pier 21 Society that eventually established the Pier 21 immigration museum.

Maxine Tynes: African Nova Scotian writer who has written about the discrimination faced by residents of Africville.

Raymond Taavel: A well-respected LGBTQ activist and former chair of Halifax Pride. He was murdered in 2012.

Halifax Transit will soon submit the vessel name, Craig Blake, to Transport Canada for approval as the name of the newest ferry, set to go into service this summer.

The new boat replaces an existing ferry, and HRM said a celebration is planned closer to the ferry's start date.

The provincial agency that investigates complaints against police has cleared a Cape Breton Regional Police officer of any wrongdoing in connection with a complaint filed by his former common-law partner.

The report resulted from a complaint filed after a 21-year-old female called regional police last Nov. 10 and 11 to report that her former partner had unlawfully entered her home, taken her dog, some protein powder, and two pairs of boots.

In a statement to SIRT investigators, the woman suggested court orders prohibited the officer from entering her home, but the investigation revealed the home was jointly owned by the couple, even though the officer had moved out. CAPE BRETON POST

A South Shore man is facing two charges of Internet luring involving chats with at least six girls under the age of 16.

An RCMP release says the provincial ICE unit carried out a search warrant at a home in Maitland on Feb. 6 and arrested Alexander John Ernst, 29, after a concerned parent told RCMP that the accused had contacted his 10- and 12-year-old daughters through social media.

The investigation led to allegations from two more girls, that they had been chatting with the accused and made arrangements to meet him in person. So far, police have identified six underage girls from the Bridgewater area with whom Ernst was allegedly in contact.

The RCMP believe Ernst may have been in contact with more young girls, and are asking anyone with information to contact them at 902-527-5555.

House to be torn down after multiple departments, 45 to 50 firefighters battle blaze

An investigation into the cause of a house fire early Tuesday morning that displaced a man and a woman will continue on Wednesday.

Ryan Thibeau, fire inspector with the Truro Fire Service, said the Brunswick Street house needs to be torn down.

"We deemed it unsafe to be inside, so we're bringing in an excavator to tear it down," he said, adding he hoped the house would be torn down in the morning. "Once it has been torn down, we will continue our investigation."

The fire was reported at around 12:45 a.m. Tuesday and when firefighters arrived, the home was engulfed of flames.

"It was fully involved," said Truro Fire Service Deputy Chief John Congdon from the scene.

Fire Chief Blois Currie said he believed at least one person was home when the fire broke out, but couldn't confirm that.

Miss Ally tragedy. Porch lights, lighthouse to shine on Sunday for missing fishermen

As the solemn second anniversary of the Miss Ally tragedy approaches, people across southwestern Nova Scotia and beyond will be

Fahmy. Harper reached out to Egypt's president: PMO

Prime Minister Stephen Harper has personally reached out to Egypt's president to secure the release of a Canadian journalist imprisoned in Cairo.

Harper's office won't say exactly when the overture between the prime minister and Egyptian President Abdel-Fattah el-Sissi took place.

"The Prime Minister has communicated with the president on this case. I'm not going to get into the specifics of the communication between the PM and the president, including the timing or details of that communication," Harper's spokesman Jason MacDonald said in an email.

Opposition Leader Tom Mulcair has called on Harper to "personally" reach out to his Egyptian counterpart to secure the release.

Mohamed Fahmy was working for satellite news broadcaster Al Jazeera English when he was arrested in December 2013, along with two colleagues. They were accused of supporting the banned Islamist Muslim Brotherhood group of ousted Egyptian president Mohammed Morsi and were charged with fabricating footage to undermine Egypt's national security.

After a trial that was internationally denounced as a sham, Fahmy was sentenced to seven years in prison. Following an appeal in January, a retrial is set to begin on Thursday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Health. Not vaccinating is 'irresponsible': Ambrose

The federal health minister says she can't help but get emotional over some parents' decision not to get their children vaccinated against infectious diseases.

"I find it really irresponsible," Rona Ambrose said Tuesday, adding that anyone who still believes a debunked and fraudulent 1990s study linking vaccines to autism should speak to their doctor.

Ambrose said measles in particular is an incredibly infectious disease and parents who refuse to get their kids immunized are putting other children at risk.

"If you don't immunize your child and you send them to school potentially ill or exposed, another child who may be more vulnerable than your own is at even a greater risk, and that's what concerns me the most," she told an unrelat-

She called vaccines miracles of modern medicine that save lives. Ambrose said Canada spends billions of dollars on vaccines for children around the world, but educated Canadians who won't allow their kids to be immunized through a publicly funded program are making the wrong decision.

DND concerned over spy drones

The country's chief of defence intelligence has taken an in-depth look at how Russia, or even China, could use drones to spy in Canada's Arctic in a wide-ranging report that was quietly flagged to some of the country's closest allies.

The report, obtained under access-to-information legislation, comes as Russia moves troops into a northern base near the Finnish border as part of an extensive military buildup.

Federal Justice Minister Peter MacKay said that the use of the notwithstanding clause in response to last week's Supreme Court of Canada ruling on doctor-assisted suicide is not being considered. ## One toddler twin set to receive her dad's liver

The father of Binh, left, and Phuoc Wagner underwent an operation Tuesday to give part of his liver to one of the ailing three-year-old twin girls. Phuoc and Binh both have Alagille syndrome, a genetic disorder that affects the liver, heart and other organs. Without liver transplants, the girls will die. Doctors decided which of the twins would receive the transplant after the family said it could not do so. The family's Facebook page indicated that Phuoc will be the twin to receive her father's liver. The Wagners are still waiting for a liver donor for their other daughter.

Vatican may be asked to repeal old Papal edicts

Human rights. Many say Catholic decrees of 1455 and 1493 allowed for the ill treatment of aboriginal peoples

Canada's Truth and Reconciliation Commission is weighing whether to ask the Vatican to repeal the Papal Bulls of Discovery that granted 15th-century explorers the right to conquer the New World and the "heathen" aboriginals.

Chair Murray Sinclair says the commission examining the impact of Canada's Indian residential schools is looking carefully at the 1455 and 1493 Catholic edicts as part of its final report.

Many argue the proclamations legitimized the treatment of aboriginal people as "less than human."

Crown sovereignty in Canada can be traced back to those papal bulls, and neither Canada nor the United States has repudiated them, Sinclair said.

A growing chorus in Canada is calling on the Vatican to help begin a new relationship with aboriginal people on equal footing. The discovery bulls, and others in the same vein that followed, gave Catholic explorers "full and free power, authority and jurisdiction of every kind" and outlined their "duty to lead the peoples dwelling in those islands and countries to embrace the Christian religion."

If aboriginal people refused, the Vatican granted its envoys the authority to enslave and kill.

If the commission recommends the bulls be rescinded, Sinclair said, it has to weigh the legal implications, which could strike at the core of Crown

Jordan's Principle

A study suggests aboriginal children often get poorer health care than other children while governments argue over who pays the bill.

- Co-author Vandna Sinha, a professor at McGill University, says the problem persists despite the federal government's position that there are no violations of the so-called Jordan's Principle.

- Jordan's Principle holds that no aboriginal child should suffer denials, delays or disruptions of health services available to other children due to jurisdictional disputes. Jordan Anderson was a Cree boy who died in hospital in 2005.

sovereignty over land.

The United Nations appointed a special rapporteur in 2009 who found the bulls lie "at the root of the violations of indigenous peoples' human rights." The edicts have resulted in the "mass appropriation of the lands, territories and resources of indigenous peoples," the UN found. They also form the legal basis of many modern-day land-claim disputes, it said.

For Keith Matthews, former chief of Simpcw First Nation in British Columbia, it's about "righting a historic wrong."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

It may not be the full-blown inquiry he would like, but the new national chief of the Assembly of First Nations says he still has high hopes for what is sure to be an emotionally wrought meeting later this month on murdered and missing aboriginal women.

Among the items on Perry Bellegarde's wish list: more federal and provincial money for housing, safe shelters, day care and wellness centres; more programs to prevent violence; and greater co-ordination among the country's various police forces when it comes to investigating cases that involve aboriginal women. Above all, Bellegarde hopes the two Conservative ministers in attendance — Status of Women Minister Kellie Leitch and Aboriginal Affairs Minister Bernard Valcourt — will share what they hear at the Feb. 27 event with their cabinet colleagues.

"We welcome their support. We welcome their attendance. We had hoped that they would take things back to their cabinet colleagues, that the dialogue and the discussions and recommendations from around the table for the ongoing support for this inquiry, or for an action plan," Bellegarde said.

Fighting picks up ahead of peace talks

Ukraine. Latest escalation of violence leaves 12 dead and 64 wounded as European leaders prepare to meet with Russia today

Diplomatic relations

Merkel has been vocal about reaching a peaceful solution between Russia and Ukraine, but the West appears less married to diplomacy as the sole road toward peace.

- Arming Ukraine. Despite meeting with Merkel, U.S. President Obama is undecided whether the U.S. will move to arm Ukraine with lethal defensive weapons should talks prove fruitless.

- Russia responds. The Kremlin has warned the West against sending weapons or pressuring Russia, which it says could destabilize the situation.

Fighting intensified Tuesday in eastern Ukraine ahead of crucial peace talks set for Wednesday, with both sides claiming significant advances. The government accused the Russian-backed rebels of shelling a town far behind the front lines, killing 12 people and left scores wounded.

The fighting, which the UN says has killed more than 5,300 people since April, comes ahead of a summit planned for Wednesday in Minsk involving the leaders of France, Germany, Russia and Ukraine.

Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko said the talks were "one of the last" opportunities for ending the fighting.

"Tomorrow's meeting in Minsk offers one of the last chances to declare an unconditional cease-fire and pull back heavy artillery," Poroshenko said Tuesday.

On Monday Germany Chancellor Angela Merkel met with U.S. President Barack Obama and Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper to secure support for a peaceful resolution.

Foreign fighters are streaming into Syria and Iraq in unprecedented numbers to join the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) or other extremist groups. At least 3,400 are from Western nations with 20,000 from around the world, U.S. intelligence officials say in an updated estimate.

Intelligence agencies now believe that as many as 150 Americans have tried and some have succeeded in reaching in the Syrian war zone. Some of those Americans were arrested en route, some died in the area and a small number are still fighting with extremists. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nigeria's Boko Haram Islamic extremists have abducted about 30 people including eight Cameroonian girls and killed seven hostages in two bus hijacks in Cameroon and Nigeria, according to Cameroon residents and a Nigerian intelligence officer Tuesday.

The bus attack took place

Seven other hostages were slain and their bodies scattered near the border, said Chetima Ahmidou, the principal of a school in the area. # Alabama officials voice opposition to gay marriage ruling

While Ernesto Mena was the sole protester outside Mobile County Probate court Monday, judge Don Davis refused to issue same-sex marriage licenses to the dozens gathered inside the courthouse. SHARON STEINMANN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gay marriage has come only to parts of Alabama after the state's chief justice sought to put the weddings on hold in defiance of a federal court order, echoing familiar refrains of resistance in the U.S. South to the involvement of federal courts.

The uneven marriage landscape left one thing certain Tuesday: The legal manoeuvring over gay marriage would continue in one of the country's most conservative states. It was a reflection of how deeply divided parts of the U.S. remain over the social issue, even as the legal tide has swung sharply in favour of gay marriage.

A federal judge's ruling went into effect Monday overturning Alabama's ban on gay marriage after the U.S. Supreme Court refused the state's request to stop the marriages.

But Alabama Chief Justice Roy Moore directed probate judges to refuse the licenses and resist what he called an "illegal" intrusion by the federal court.

In another dissenting opinion, Justice Clarence Thomas criticized the Supreme Court's order on Alabama, saying his colleagues were inappropriately signalling they intend to clear the way for gay marriage across the nation.

More Alabama courthouses allowed same-sex marriage Tuesday but other counties still refused, prompting a new round of federal court action.

So far, couples can marry in at least 10 of the state's 67 counties.

With the Alabama ruling, gay marriage remains banned in only 13 of the 50 U.S. states.

Robots will cut labour costs 24%, report says

Growth. Robot usage forecast to rise 10% a year in the world's 25 biggest exporting countries, up from current 2% to 3%

Cheaper, better robots are expected to cut labour costs at Canadian factories by 24 per cent over the next decade, as more companies replace human workers at a faster pace, according to a report issued Tuesday.

Globally, labour costs are expected to be reduced by some 16 per cent by 2025, the report by the Boston Consulting Group predicts.

In a separate report, RBC Global Asset Management notes that robots can be re-programmed far faster and more efficiently than humans can be retrained when products are updated or replaced.

Robots won't be limited to developed countries with their aging, high-cost workforces. Even low-wage China will use robots to slash labour costs by 18 per cent, Boston Consulting predicts.

Increasing automation is likely to change the way companies evaluate where to open and expand factories. Boston Consulting expects manufacturers will "no longer simply chase cheap labour." Factories will employ fewer people, and that could lure more manufacturers back to Canada and the United States from lower-wage countries.

As hackers routinely overwhelm computer defences, experts say cybersecurity is beyond due for an overhaul.

Their message: Neutralize attackers once they're inside networks rather than fixating on trying to keep them out.

Bank of Canada

Experts predict key lending rate will be cut again

The Bank of Canada says it's prepared to take action to help navigate the economic uncertainty tied to low oil prices, as experts predict it once again could cut its trend-setting interest rate.

Senior deputy governor Carolyn Wilkins made the remarks in a speech Tuesday — as many observers expect the central bank is preparing to drop its rate even further next month.

The Bank of Canada blindsided markets in January by lowering its overnight rate to 0.75 per cent from one per cent.

Wilkins, who expects the Canadian economy to grow with help from the lower loonie and a stronger U.S. economy, predicted Canada's non-energy sector to lead the growth.

Wilkins also indicated the central bank is monitoring job-market concerns, such as the low average number of hours worked and the high rate of involuntary part-time workers. She said "prime-age" workers between 25 and 54 years old and young people between 15 and 24 years old remain underemployed.

VACCINES FOR KIDS SHOULD BE MANDATORY

readers@metronews.ca

Ready for your daily dose of controversy? I believe strongly in childhood vaccinations. Wait, I'm not done. I believe they should be mandatory.

I can feel thousands of readers bristling right now. This is a sensitive topic because most of us love our children, and most of us want what is best for them. But that doesn't mean we are always acting in their best interest. And that's when the government should step in.

Here's why: We need a 95 per cent vaccination rate for herd immunity to protect against contagious diseases, and according to UNICEF, Canada's rate hovers around 84 per cent. So until we raise the immunization rates, we are all at risk.

If you think the government has no right to meddle in how we care for our children, you're wrong. It meddles every day, and rightly so.

It intervenes when children are raised in filthy homes, allowed to ride in cars without seatbelts, left unattended at home, or refused life-saving medical treatment. Religion, culture and ideology do not trump these laws.

Why is it different when parents say "no" to childhood vaccines?

Maybe because it was less of an issue a decade ago. Vaccination rates are declining, according to the U.S. Center for Disease Control, due in part to a growing culture of distrust in big pharma and regulatory agencies. What this means is we need better education campaigns and more transparency into vaccine safety and oversight.

The reality is we've been inoculating against deadly diseases for more than 200 years, and the science is well-established: Vaccines are safe and a crucial component of childhood and community health. Ingredients undergo rigorous testing and serious reactions — which are incredibly rare — are highly monitored.

The diseases we vaccinate against can be fatal — they kill hundreds of thousands of children in developing countries every year. And they can return when vaccination rates decline. That means the benefits of vaccines by far outweigh the risks.

So why do we allow parents to gamble with kids' lives — their own kids, or the lives of newborns and other peoples' children who can't be immunized for health reasons — by refusing vaccinations? Especially when the science is so clear, and the dangers so terrible?

The diseases we vaccinate against kill hundreds of thousands of children in developing countries every year. GETTY IMAGES

This is not a debate about individual rights versus public health, because kids are not extensions of us — they are individuals with their own rights.

The debate is where to draw the line when it comes to parental freedom of choice.

Parenthood, in the wise words of my father, is not a right but a privilege, and that's an important distinction. It's not our "right" to make any choice we want for our kids, it's our duty to make wise ones, ones that set them on the best path.

That's why when a parent makes a choice on behalf of the child that puts that child or others at serious risk, regardless of their intentions, society should step in.

Is this dangerous government overreach? Slovenia and Croatia don't think so. Both countries have made vaccinations mandatory for nine specific diseases.

Croatia's Constitutional Court said it best when it ruled "the child's right to health is more than the rights of parents to the (wrong) choice."

That country's decision to overrule parental freedom for the sake of community well-being means that diphtheria, whooping cough and measles have been eradicated there.

In fact, 14 European countries have at least one mandatory vaccination included in their program.

So what would happen if Canada also imposed mandatory vaccinations? Many parents would be up in arms. But ... so what?

We live in a highly relativistic society and tend to wring our hands endlessly over respect for other people's points of view, even when those views are contrarian. But when people choose to reject clear scientific evidence in favour of their own misguided beliefs, the hand-wringing should stop.

Especially when the well-being of children is involved.

3-DNA-sourced babies

'There is a line and we're crossing it. I think we can cross it if we are extremely cautious': Bioethicist

With the three-parent IVF technique recently getting the green light in the U.K., debate is brewing in Canada about the controversial procedure.

While it is currently illegal in Canada under the Assisted Human Reproduction Act of 2004, proponents say it would allow couples to have healthy children in cases where the mother might otherwise pass on mitochondrial disease. Moreover, these children would be almost entirely genetically their own offspring.

Metro asked Kerry Bowman, a bioethicist with the University of Toronto, for his take. The following has been edited down from a longer interview:

You've said before that you give the technique cautious approval. Why?

Approval is a bit strong. I get it with three-person reproduction and why you would want to do this. By doing so you can hopefully prevent the suffering and early death of babies and young children. There's something called mitochondrial disease and if you do this technique, hopefully — if it goes well — you could

Is three-parent IVF a fair term?

"Some people would say it is an overly dramatic term and it's inaccurate, because there's really two genetic parents. I don't really agree with that, because the child wouldn't be born if you didn't have the third input from the third parent, so I think it is actually an accurate use of language."

Kerry Bowman, bioethicist

avoid that. But we are crossing a line. Some people say what we are really doing is genetically altering an unborn child. We're actually changing what's called the human germ line. And some people say, 'Well, what does that matter?' But when people are looking at their identity, they're studying their ancestry and who we are as people, our geographical origins from an evolutionary point of view, migration point of view — that's all traced through mitochondrial DNA. Identity isn't necessarily about percentages; it's about what your story is.

So you're saying this is significantly different from other reproductive assistance technologies? Yes, this is the first time it would be inheritable, passed down from generation to generation. So there are a lot of things to consider. What are the risks? Unknown. There are no foreseeable risks but that doesn't mean no risks will occur.

What other applications could this type of technology have? We don't have the capacity yet, but this is the type of technique that could be used to genetically enhance unborn babies, so designer, babies, essentially. I don't think that would be the right thing to do. But I think with mitochondrial DNA, the biggest thing is that there is a line and we're crossing it. I think we can cross it if we are extremely cautious.

What specific policies would you suggest we adopt then? I fully acknowledge that right

A simplified explanation:

The technique takes the nucleus of a mother's egg and places it in a donor's egg, from which the nucleus has been removed. This new egg contains the donor's mitochondria (but not the mother's). It is then fertilized with the father's sperm.

- In this way, the child inherits the vast majority of its DNA from the mother and father, but inherits the mitochondrial DNA from the donor mother.

now it is illegal, but a lot has changed since 2004. A lot. So I think you would need to go case by case, and the only cases that would be allowed — if it were going to be allowed — would be for cases of mitochondrial disease. And I think it would be wise to wait to see what happens in Britain.

Stewart writes his Dear Jon letter to Comedy Central

Jon Stewart will be leaving The Daily Show after nearly 17 years, he announced to the audience of Tuesday night's episode. The comedian, writer and director took over in 1999 from Craig Kilborn, slowly turning the fledgling newscast spoof into a cultural and political force, taking politicians on both sides of the aisle, the media and even himself to task for any misstep, while also launching the careers of Stephen Colbert, Steve Carell and John Oliver.

"For the better part of the last two decades, I have had the incredible honour and privilege of working with Jon Stewart. His comedic brilliance is second to none," Comedy Central president Michele Ganeless said in a statement. "Jon has been at the heart of Comedy Central, championing and nurturing the best talent in the industry, in front of and behind the camera. Through his unique voice and vision,

The Daily Show has become a cultural touchstone for millions of fans and an unparalleled platform for political comedy that will endure for years to come."

No set date for Stewart's departure was announced, though Ganeless did say the host would continue on the show "until later this year." Stewart first took a leave of absence from the show to direct his feature film, Rosewater, leaving Oliver to sit in for him.

Double the Spider-Man, half the Garfield

Good news for comic book movie fans, but not so much good news for Amazing Spider-Man star Andrew Garfield. Marvel has hashed out a deal to regain creative control of one of its highest-profile characters without the beleaguered Sony having to lose one of its two remaining bankable franchises — the other being Bond.

According to a statement from Marvel, "the new Spider-Man will first appear in a Marvel film from Marvel's Cinematic Universe. Sony Pictures will thereafter release the next installment of its $4-billion Spider-Man franchise, on July 28, 2017, in a film that will be co-produced by Kevin Feige and his expert team at Marvel, and Amy Pascal, who oversaw the franchise launch for the studio 13 years ago. Together, they will collaborate on a new creative direction for the web-slinger. Sony Pictures will continue to finance, distribute, own and have final creative control of the Spider-Man films."

Unfortunately, when they say "the new Spider-Man," they're not kidding. The Hollywood Reporter claims that current Spidey star Andrew Garfield will not be involved. Now the question is which Marvel film Spider-Man first pops up in. The smart money is on Captain America: Civil War, due out in May 2016, but wouldn't it be awesome if he snuck into this year's Avengers?

A watershed time for transgender rights

Social change. Gossip about Bruce Jenner's possible transition is occurring at the same moment that key legal battles are heating up

Whether or not Olympic legend Bruce Jenner becomes its new champion, the transgender rights movement is making remarkable strides on many fronts — ranging from mass-media visibility to legal protections. Yet despite the gains, activists say many transgender Americans, far more so than gays and lesbians, remain vulnerable to violence, discrimination and lack of understanding.

"We see transgender rights as the next wave of the work we need to do, after marriage equality," said Katherine Franke, director of Columbia Law School's Center for Gender and Sexuality Law.

"Getting protections on paper is important," she said. "But the day-to-day lives of many transgender people won't be affected — they're unemployed, they're experiencing violence in the streets, in shelters, in schools."

Allyson Robinson, an activist working to end the U.S. military's ban on transgender people serving openly, said gains for transgender rights in some areas have triggered a backlash from some social and religious conservatives who feel they've lost the fight against same-sex marriage.

"Transgender people and Former Olympic athlete Bruce Jenner, with stitches and a scar on his face, is seen here at an NBA basketball game in Los Angeles in 2012. their identities and communities are under siege right now on multiple fronts," she said, citing as an example recent bills proposed in state legislatures that would make it illegal for transgender people to use a bathroom that doesn't correspond with their biological gender.

The mix of advancement and adversity forms a backdrop to what promises to be an intriguing melodrama over the coming months regarding Jenner, the 1976 decathlon gold medalist who was featured on Wheaties boxes and more recently has appeared as a real-life stepfather on Keeping Up With the Kardashians.

Though Jenner himself has declined public comment, those in his inner circles have not challenged the mounting speculation that he is preparing to live as a woman and perhaps will appear in a new reality series about his transition.

His mother, Esther Jenner, told The Associated Press on Wednesday that she had spoken with her son about his private and public journey.

"He said, 'I want to be honest about my identity, and I know this is coming out in the press,'" Esther Jenner

Quoted

"Transgender people and their identities and communities are under siege right now on multiple fronts." Activist Allyson Robinson said. "He started by saying, 'We need to have a long, serious talk.' I am at peace with what he is and what he's doing."

Over the weekend, Jenner was in an unwelcome spotlight as one of the drivers in a four-car crash in Malibu, Calif., that claimed a woman's life. The spotlight on him could grow more intense in the months ahead.

Among activists and bloggers who focus on lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender issues, there's widespread sentiment that Jenner alone should dictate the pace and the details of any disclosure he wants to make about his identity. Yet there's also keen interest in what sort of impact he might have were he to confirm a transition that would make him arguably the most famous American ever to openly identify as transgender.

Depending on how Jenner's story is presented and received, the revelation that a lauded athlete and member of one of the nation's most visible families is transgender could be comparable to the cultural shifts that accompanied the news that movie star Rock Hudson was gay and died of AIDS-related complications and that basketball great Magic Johnson, a heterosexual, was HIV-positive.

"In the long term, we'd say the disclosures were helpful for the movement to normalize homosexuality and bring better medical attention to AIDS/HIV," Franke said. "When celebrities came out as being members of these communities, it ended up shifting the national narrative." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Uma, is that you?

Uma Thurman GETTY IMAGES

A change of face for Thurman

You might just have to take our word for it that you're looking at a photograph of Kill Bill star Uma Thurman, who hit the red carpet for NBC's The Slap looking nearly unrecognizable. Her minimal makeup look seems like a perfect opportunity to illustrate just how much of a difference eyeshadow and eyeliner can make. Seriously, it's remarkable. Or maybe it's just the contrast between the very red lipstick and the nearly makeup-free eyes. Or the lack of distinctive bangs. Or the fact that she didn't really feel like smiling.

The Slap a star-powered character study

TV. Eight-episode series examines the aftermath of a moment of discipline

LISA WEIDENFELD
Metro in New York City

The Slap represents a new step for NBC. The hour-long show is a drama based on an Australian program, but it's a limited episode run, with only eight shows in its season, and a serious list of prestige players took part. The Kids Are All Right director Lisa Cholodenko directed every episode, playwright Jon Robin Baitz wrote it, and the show stars Peter Sarsgaard, Thandie Newton, Zachary Quinto and Uma Thurman. The action centres around a group of Brooklynites whose urbane existence is shaken up when one of them (Quinto) slaps another's misbehaving child at backyard barbecue.

Asked what it's like playing the person at the heart of the action, Quinto says, "It's only the centre of the controversy because it's the incident. There are so many other things that are happening and there are so many other levels of complexity in each of these characters. They all have their own epicentre of disaster in their lives."

The series examines ideas of parenting in America, always a heady topic, as there's a clash between the Greek immigrant family on one side of the debate, and the longtime U.S. residents on the other. Is the slap child abuse, or an accepted mode of discipline for a rowdy child? Despite the fact that these are all people who are close enough to attend a party together, Quinto says the characters will "very clearly" divide into camps, but on a broader scale, he hopes audiences are more torn.

"I think if it works, there'll be a lot of going back and forth," says Quinto.

"I like to hold a mirror up to the audience and I like for them to take responsibility for their feelings and their thoughts and their beliefs."

It's a new direction for Quinto, who many audiences know from his work as Spock or as the villainous Sylar on Heroes.

"I was thrilled to get the opportunity to do this. I've known Robbie (Baitz) for years. I'm a big admirer of his work," says Quinto.

"I'm drawn to things that invite an audience in and light

Genre hero

• Though Quinto is making the change from genre to a more straightforward drama, he's still getting into trouble. "(My character) Harry is arguably the villain of the series, but in a very human way, so for me it was about getting into a world that was not elevated or supernatural or science fiction. This is a very human world. So now that I've had the opportunity to do that, I feel a sense of closure on the sort of villainous aspect of my persona."

• Just how goofy can Quinto get? He says he's "looking forward to a future of varied opportunities," and jokes that what's coming next will be "some lighter fare."

a little bit of a fire to generate some discourse, dialogue, debate, and it doesn't give the audience the answer. There's no clear-cut point of view with this story and I like that."

So, what's New with the Girl this season?

TV. Jake Johnson chats about his character, his cast and the game that's caused a stir

Metro in New York City

Midway through its fourth season, New Girl is still finding new situations to throw its oddball loft residents into. This season has seen the characters exploring new careers, as Winston tries life as a cop, Jess takes on leadership responsibilities at her school and Nick and Schmidt decide to team up and sell sweatshirt suits. But that doesn't mean the show isn't going to give the people a little bit of what they love about the show. We talked to Jake Johnson

Look out for it

Anything else you can tease about what's coming up on the show?

- Justin Long is coming back, Josh Gad is coming back. So we got some good stuff coming up.

(Nick) about what's ahead for the show, and a new confusing rule for their famous history-based drinking game, True American.

Will we see more True American this year?

Absolutely. I think we'll see True American for as long as the show goes.

Are you an expert on the game at this point?

Here's the reality, and it's disappointing for fans who want it to be something it's not. I say this as an expert, because I've been in every True American scene, and I was there when it started: There are no rules.

You guys are just making it up?

The guy who wrote the first one, Luvh Rakhe, came to set and said, we haven't figured this one out. It's some sort of a drinking game. And then we all started saying things that we used to do in drinking games.

So you just throw in anything you can think of.

It's like the chop suey of drinking games. Anything you got, throw it in. If you're playing quarters and want to turn it into True American, you can. Just add it, and it's True American.

Well, there's a president on the coin.

That's right. That's what it is. You have to say a president if you hit it, then you point to who drinks and that's your vice-president. If they don't know the vice-president of the president you named, they have to take two drinks.

We just saw Nick get dumped. What's coming up for him?

Nick's going to be single a bit. I'd like to see Nick date a little bit. I'd like to see him find somebody. I just texted Liz Meriwether, maybe it's time Nick gets in a relationship. Hopefully she'll listen. I'd like to date someone who's a really good actor and do a bunch of stories with them.

Jake Johnson has made up a new rule for True American, the show's beloved drinking game. CONTRIBUTED

Cali's sand and surf combo

Adventure. Just a quick flight separates ski and surf in the Golden State's south

life@metronews.ca

Shredding powder and riding frothy swells may be mutually exclusive pursuits but just as chefs routinely indulge palates by putting lobster and steak on the same plate, skiing and surfing don't have to be getaway strangers, even in the dead of winter. Indulge in the best of both worlds in Southern California by pairing a ski vacation at Mammoth Mountain with some surfing in San Diego.

Some like it cold

Mammoth Lakes, a quick flight from San Diego, L.A. or San Francisco, is a snowy town that sits atop a sleeping volcano in a valley on the eastern side of the Sierra Nevada Mountains. A West Coast winter wonderland, Mammoth is home to the third most popular ski mountain in the U.S. after Vail and Breckenridge. Forget about California concrete — that heavy, wet, gloppy snow associated with other parts of the Golden State.

Mammoth's pillowy white stuff is as fluffy and cuddly as the Ice Age flicks. The mountain tends to get covered in a lighter snow owing to its 11,000-foot elevation, and because it's predominantly north-facing, the snowpack stays fresher longer, allowing for an extended season. The mountain has stayed open as late as July 4.

Intermediate skiers keen to climb to the summit for a sick 360-degree view of alpine peaks and indelible white-

Mammoth Mountain's 11,000-foot elevation guarantees plenty of fluffy white powder. TERRY BARENTSEN

Sky high

Keep the adrenalin pumping by jumping off a 300-foot cliff at Torrey Pines Gliderport. Tethered to a giant kite, you'll soar like an eagle over Black's Beach and one of Cali's most storied golf courses. Tandem paraglides with a USHPA-certified instructor are $175 and be sure to get there a little early to sign and initial a sheaf of paperwork about as thick as a small-town phone book.

If ski and surf aren't enough, try paragliding over Black's Beach. TERRY BARENTSEN capped minarets are in luck. Exit the mountain-topping Panorama Gondola and peel right toward the blue square-rated Upper Road Runner, a leisurely three-mile-long cat track that offers plenty of scenic vistas as it winds its way back down to Main Lodge.

Stay: Steps from the village and a gondola to the slopes, the Westin Monache Resort puts you in the heart of Mammoth. Plus, the breathtaking Mountain view from the outdoor hot tubs doesn't hurt.

Après-ski

For a taste of Cali-style barbecue, line up for a table at The Smokeyard BBQ & Chop Shop in Mammoth village. The shop is ostensibly a purveyor of smoky, finger-licking carnivorous delights; their brontosaurus-sized beef ribs will lull you into a Flinstonian meat coma. But outside an array of slow-cooked animal-flesh options are a couple unexpected menu items that shout out to the South African proprietors' culinary heritage. There's a mildly spiced durban curry as well as potjiekos (a popular Rainbow Nation stew) on offer. Next, toast to the high altitude lifestyle with a brew or two from Mammoth Brewing Company. Sip on a Fire & Eisbock, practically Mammoth in a bottle. Lava rocks heated up under an open fire dropped into the boil lend it a caramelized flavour and post-fermentation freeze distillation amps up the alcohol content.

Some like it hot

San Diego's 90 kilometres of sun-kissed playa has something for both beach bums and adventurers. For communing with bohemians and the dazed and confused set, head to Ocean Beach. For a wave-riding initiation, La Jolla Shores is the place. The scenic cliffs and caves block south swells, creating a protected bay for most of the year. Even if your idea of hanging 10 is holding onto the rim of a basketball hoop, the vivacious and confidence-instilling instructors at Surf Diva (2160 Avenida de la Playa) will have you up and riding in no time. Private one-hour surf lessons can be had for $93.50 or $99 for Stand Up Paddleboarding, with lower per-person rates for small groups.

Après-surf

Recap the day's exploits while sipping on something at Hard Rock Hotel San Diego's rooftop bar FLOAT, a posh lounge with firepits and cocktail waitresses in outfits snatched from Jessie J's closet.

The ghost towns of the American southwest

Tour. Explore the crumbling communities left behind by the mining bust of the Old West

The Amargosa Hotel in Death Valley Junction, Calif., was once a hub of activity, the Spanish Colonial-style buildings filled with workers from the Pacific Coast Borax company.

Once the mine shut down, the people left, leaving the U-shaped hotel and the opera house attached to it at the centre of what is now considered a ghost town. “There wasn't much reason for people to stick around, other than to stay at the hotel or visit the opera house,” the Amargosa's Bob Muldowney said during a tour of the opera house. “Now, that's all that's left.”

Death Valley Junction wasn't the only town to feel the boom and bust of the Old West mining days. Ghost towns dot the landscape across the southwestern U.S., once-thriving cultural hubs abandoned and left in shambles. Many are still fairly well-preserved, though, and offer visitors a chance to see a piece of history — even if it is in pieces.

Bodie, Calif.

Located near the Nevada state line east of California's Yosemite National Park, Bodie is one of the most famous ghost towns in the United States, in part because it's so well preserved. The town boomed during the Gold Rush, with an estimated 10,000 residents in 1880, more than 60 saloons and a red-light district. Once the mine shut down, so did the town, all but abandoned by the early 1900s. Today, its 100-or-so buildings are maintained by the California parks system, which protects the town in “an arrested state of decay,” keeping the buildings standing but making few other alterations. Bodie is located 21 kilometres off Highway 395 down a dusty, bumpy road in an isolated area, so make sure you have plenty of gas. Also, beware if you take off with an artifact from town — a curse reportedly comes with it until the item is returned.

Gleeson, Ariz.

Originally called Turquoise, Gleeson is one of several ghost towns near the famous Wild West town of Tombstone. Native Americans first mined turquoise in the area and settlers found copper, lead and silver in the area in the late 1800s. A fire destroyed 28 buildings in 1912, but the town was rebuilt and continued to thrive until the mines shut down around 1940. A handful of people still live in the area, but it has the ghost-town feel, with numerous buildings in various states of decay. Ruins include a hospital, saloon, store, jail, and cemetery. Courtland and Pearce are nearby, part of what is known as the Ghost Town Trail.

Rhyolite, Nev.

If you like decrepit buildings in your ghost town, this is the place to see. Located northeast of Death Valley National Park, Rhyolite was established in 1905 during the Gold Rush and grew quickly, filled with buildings that had electricity, water mains, an opera house and a stock exchange. It fell apart nearly as fast; the mine closed in 1911 and the town was all but abandoned by 1920. Since then, it has become one of the most photogenic ghost towns in the West because of the crumpled buildings and the impressive rocky landscape. The town became a popular site for movies and some of the buildings were further destroyed during shooting. Among the ruins are the Bottle House, walls from the three-story bank building, part of the jail and an old caboose.

Death Valley Junction, Calif.

The town near the eastern entrance of Death Valley National Park thrived while the borax mine and Death Valley Railroad were in operation. By the late 1920s, Death Valley Junction was little more than a tourist stop on the way to the park. The town is still a draw, thanks to the Amargosa Hotel. The hotel claims to be haunted and the Amargosa Opera House is a must-see. Marta Becket, a former Broadway bal-

Goldfield, Ariz., is a more touristy version of the southwest ghost town.

Goldfield, Ariz.

If you're into touristy ghost towns, Goldfield is the place to visit. Located in Apache Junction just outside Phoenix, it became a bustling town when gold was discovered in the 1890s. Goldfield had about 4,000 residents, a general store, post office, school and hotel in its heyday, but was all but abandoned after the gold vein dried up in the 1920s. Today, the town has become a popular tourist attraction, with daily Old West gunfights, gold panning and rides on Arizona's only narrow-gauge train. Numerous tours are available, including through the Goldfield Mine, Lu Lu's Bordello, the Mystery Shack and the Goldfield Historic Museum.

Looking to do more than give your sweetheart a dozen roses this Valentine's Day? There are plenty of options across the country for a last-minute romantic getaway.

Victoria, B.C., was voted the Most Romantic City in Canada in 2013 by Amazon.ca and third in the Top Ten Most Romantic North America Getaways in 2014. Stroll along Government Street, where the trees are wrapped in pink and red fairy lights, enjoy a candlelit dinner overlooking the inner harbour or hide away for a night at the Inn at Laurel Point. In addition to a number of romance themed hotel packages for guests, the entire staff have undergone Month of Love training sessions, ensuring they are immersed in the Valentine's Day spirit and ready to share their favourite romantic moments, movies and quotes.

Skating hand-in-hand along Ottawa's Rideau Canal skate way is the perfect outdoor romantic activity. Follow that with a soak in the hot pools and a visit to the steam rooms and saunas of the Nordik Nature Spa in nearby Chelsea, Québec. Ottawa Tourism's Winterlude Amour package includes two nights' accommodation at a variety of hotels, shopping discounts at the downtown Rideau Centre and optional passes to a variety of museums, spa treatments or a chocolate lover's tour of the ByWard Market neighbourhood with C'est Bon Epicurean Adventures.

If you find yourself in Banff, Alta. on Feb. 14, take your special someone to the Cave and Basin National Historic Site. A brand new outdoor skating rink is opening on the grounds just in time for the big day. Sweep your sweetie off his or her feet with an evening of skating under the moonlight accompanied by music and old-time movies and surrounded by the splendour of the Rocky Mountains.

No other centre in Canada celebrates winter quite like Quebec City, with pristine snow coating the landscape, giving the appearance everything is all tucked away in a snow globe.

It's a city known for being downright frigid, but luckily there's ample opportunity to rest and relax in wondrous warmth.

Plant yourself in Old Quebec at the toasty warm boutique property Hotel 71, located in the building that was once the National Bank of Canada's first head office. The building's facade is a stunning example of 19th century neo-classic architecture while its interior features 60 contemporary rooms and suites. # Finding an inclusive work environment

Career. How to know if an employer is welcoming towards individuals with disabilities

CAROLINE
RUDOLPH-ZBARSKY
TalentEgg.ca

Getting a job if you have a disability can be easier than you might think if you know where to look.

Today, companies want to be more inclusive of the Canadian workforce and more reflective of the customers that they serve.

My experience as an employment specialist has shown me that companies often don't know where to go to find diverse talent. Recent graduates with disabilities are often afraid to apply for their ideal positions for fear of discrimination through the recruitment process without realizing those employers may be seeking someone with precisely their profile. Below are a few tips for finding employers committed to recruiting and retaining diverse talent.

Diversity and Inclusion (D&I) partnerships

Identifying employers that sponsor, partner with and/or support organizations and associations committed to D&I is one way to know if an employer is inclusive. Such employers typically have a culture that is open, accommodating, and values diversity. Research which employers support these efforts.

There are numerous major Canadian D&I organizations worth checking out.

Here are some of my favourites:

Major conferences and job fairs

Participation and support of diversity and inclusion events are great indicators of the level of inclusiveness at a particular company. Companies attend these events because it is important to their values.

- At recruiting sessions, they are looking for diverse talent. Here you can meet and network with individuals responsible for recruitment initiatives to promote inclusion at their organizations. At conferences and seminars advocating for inclusive practices you can connect with employers, who support these initiatives.

- You can also follow organizations committed to D&I on Twitter and LinkedIn and join their mailing lists to ensure you don't miss out on any upcoming events.

- The Canadian Centre for Diversity and Inclusion (CCDI): This organization provides tools and support to employers looking to become more inclusive.

- The Job Opportunity Information Network (JOIN): With more than 60 employer partners, their Business Leadership Network consists of more than 30 employers who are committed to promoting the hiring of persons with disabilities.

- Canadian Business SenseAbility: A national organization run by private-sector business leaders aiming to accelerate business success through the talents of persons with disabilities.

The Google test

When evaluating a company's commitment to D&I, start with a simple online search, which can be surprisingly effective.

Companies aren't shy about communicating and promoting their values: They want clients, staff, prospective employees and stakeholders to know their organizational beliefs, goals and commitments.

When attracting the best talent, they want to demonstrate why they are an employer of choice. It's also good for business; people prefer to deal with companies with good cultures and core values.

Searching for the employer 'name + diversity + Canada' gives a pretty good overview of their commitment level.

Check their website to see if they have a diversity section, learn about their inclusive practices, what causes they support and their current initiatives.

Companies that support inclusive hiring will make an effort to highlight this on a diversity page.

Are they award-winning?

To be recognized with an award, companies must be doing a few things right. Numerous organizations recognize the efforts of employers who are making an impact with their diversity and inclusion practices.

The two following awards are to me the more prestigious out there. Take a look at the lists and see which employers have won awards and

With the right employer, you can find a perfect fit, including accommodations in both the infrastructure and the workplace culture itself. ISTOCK why.

The Canada's Best Diversity Employers list recognizes Canadian employers with "exceptional workplace diversity and inclusiveness programs." The 100 winning employers (all in Canada) are a strong core of more than 3,500 companies that participated in the competition.

Both the DiversityInc Top 50 List and the DiversityInc Top 10 Companies For People With Disabilities are a rich database of inclusive global companies with operations in Canada.

Their ranking mechanism is quite detailed, including factors such as inclusiveness of their career application process, the level of on-the-job accommodations offered, their focus on working with vendors owned by persons with disabilities and the presence of certain benefits such as telecommuting and employee resource groups.

Kale shows off hearty side in soup

FLASH FOOD

From your fridge to your table in about 30 minutes

The month of February is the perfect time to enjoy some great sports and, of course, delicious food.

Even though football has died down, basketball and hockey are holding strong, along with curling and the golf tournaments that make me wish for warmer weather.

So as I was thinking about all these hard-working athletes and what I would cook for them, my mind went to a winter warm-up recipe in which soup grabs the spotlight.

I'm convinced soup would hit the spot for many athletes and sport watchers alike.

So here is a great winter warm-up soup that is easy to serve to your family for a weeknight meal or to friends when they come over to watch the game. It also works well for a lunch-time meal.

This soup has a rich broth full of sausage, potatoes and greens that add fibre and a hearty taste.

This Chunky Sausage and Kale Soup recipe serves six to eight. EMILY RICHARDS

Directions

1. In large soup pot, heat oil over medium-high heat and brown sausages on all sides. Remove to cutting board, cut into slices and return to pot.

2. Add onions, carrot, celery and garlic and cook, stirring for about 5 minutes or until softened. Add potatoes and stock. Bring to boil, cover and reduce heat and simmer for about 15 minutes or until potatoes are tender when pierced with fork.

3. Meanwhile, chop kale and Swiss chard to make about 12 cups (3 litres) of lightly packed greens. Add to sausage mixture and simmer uncovered for about 15 minutes or until greens are tender.

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp (15 ml) extra virgin olive oil
- 1 lb (500 g) fresh chorizo, Italian, farmer's or chicken sausages
- 2 onions, chopped

- 1 each carrot and celery stalk, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 4 Yukon Gold potatoes, (about

- 1 1/2 lbs/750 g) peeled and chopped
- 10 cups (2.5 l) low-sodium beef stock
- 1 small bunch kale, with the tough

- ribs removed
- Half bunch Swiss chard, trimmed

Dinner or lunch

Stracciatella Soup

This soup is perfect when there is nothing but eggs left in the fridge.

Stracci means "little rags" which is what the egg mixture forms when stirred into the stock.

By including the parsley, you add colour and extra flavour.

If you happen to have some spinach in the crisper, add about 1 cup (250 ml) thinly shredded spinach to this soup. A chopped red pepper would be delicious, too.

For a different twist try using Pecorino Romano cheese for the Parmesan.

- 6 cups (1.5 l) chicken stock
- 4 eggs
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) grated Parmesan cheese
- 3 tbsp (50 ml) chopped fresh Italian parsley
- Pinch pepper
- Pinch fresh nutmeg

1. In saucepan bring stock to boil, reduce heat and simmer.

2. Meanwhile, in bowl, use fork to beat together eggs, cheese, parsley, pepper and nutmeg. Using a spoon to stir, slowly drizzle egg mixture into stock.

3. Simmer, stirring for about 3 minutes or until egg is set. EMILY RICHARDS

Cheese adds a nice flavour to this simple soup.

Clams, croutons and broth — oh, my!

1. Heat the oven to 350 F. Line a rimmed baking sheet with kitchen parchment or foil.

2. Arrange bread cubes on the prepared baking sheet, then mist with olive oil, tossing to coat all sides. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, then toast in the oven until golden, about 10 minutes, stirring halfway through. Remove croutons from oven and allow to cool.

3. Meanwhile, make soup. In a large, heavy saucepan or Dutch oven over medium heat, melt the butter. Add the shallots and cook, stirring often, until soft, about 5 minutes. Crumble the soy chorizo and add to the pot. Cook until lightly golden, about another 5 minutes. Add the garlic and cook another minute, or until very fragrant.

4. Sprinkle with flour, then stir. Increase heat to medium-high and add the wine, stirring constantly for about 1 minute to deglaze the pan. Add the chicken stock and water, then bring to a simmer. Taste and season with salt and pepper, as needed.

5. Stir in the kale, then gently add the clams. Cover the pot and let the clams steam just until they open, about 4 minutes, removing the clams as they open and discarding any that don't. Remove the pot from heat and stir in the lemon juice, then ladle into serving bowls. Top with croutons and parsley. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/ MELISSA D'ARABIAN, AN EXPERT ON HEALTHY EATING ON A BUDGET AND AUTHOR OF SUPERMARKET HEALTHY.

Ingredients

- 3 slices French or Italian bread, cut into 1-inch cubes
- Olive oil cooking spray
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 3 tbsp butter
- 4 shallots, sliced
- 1/2 lbs soy chorizo sausage, casings removed (if any)
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tsp all-purpose flour

- 2/3 cup dry white wine
- 2 1/2 cups low-sodium chicken stock
- 1/2 cup water
- 3/4 bunch kale, stems discarded, chopped (about 1 1/2 cups)
- 2 lbs fresh clams, scrubbed
- 1 tbsp lemon juice
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley

Don and Ron to make appearances at Scotiabank Centre

Don and Ron will be in the Halifax Mooseheads' house Saturday night.

Hockey Night in Canada broadcasters Don Cherry and Ron McLean are set to drop the puck for Halifax's match-up against provincial rivals the Cape Breton Screaming Eagles, as part of pre-game ceremonies at the Scotiabank Centre.

Saturday's game, and Friday night's home game against the Shawinigan Cataractes, will air live nationally on Sportsnet, both starting at 8 p.m. AT, as part of Hockey Day in Canada celebrations in Halifax this year.

The annual event kicks off Wednesday evening, with Mooseheads general manager Cam Russell and majority owner Bobby Smith participating in an NHL alumni shinny game at the Halifax Forum, starting at 6 p.m.

Herd rookie Brett Crossley and his Cole Harbour family will be featured Saturday on Hockey Day in Canada programming. MacLean will also visit Cole Harbour on Sunday, as part of the Rogers Hometown Hockey Tour. METRO

Health the focus of symposium next month

Health and hockey professionals will put their heads together at a new symposium next month in Halifax.

The inaugural Hockey Health Symposium takes place March 13 at the World Trade and Convention Centre, as part of the Canadian Interuniversity Sport men's hockey championship week.

"The value of exercise, injury prevention, proper equipment and effective nutrition will be discussed by international experts," orthopaedic surgeon Dr. William Stanish said in a news release Tuesday, adding there will also be a panel dedicated to discussing concussions.

The 2015 University Cup is set for March 12 to 15 at the Scotiabank Centre. METRO

Full Steve ahead as Huskies lead series

AUS hockey.

Saint Mary's top line accounts for both goals in Game 1 vs. Moncton

kristen.lipscombe@metronews.ca

The three Steves had some tricks up their maroon-and-white sleeves to kick off their first-round AUS playoff series.

Stephen Johnston scored twice for the Saint Mary's Huskies in a 2-0 win over the Moncton Aigles Bleus on Tuesday night. Both goals were assisted by Steven Beyers and Steven Shipley, in front of 892 fans at the Halifax Forum.

"This is a new thing," Johnston said of the successful line combination, which led the Huskies to a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three-game series. "Tonight, it worked out well."

Johnston's first goal came just 54 seconds into the game with Beyers feeding the puck high in the offensive zone to Shipley, who "found me with a great pass, back-door."

Not long into the middle frame the Steves connected again "and I just put it back-hand on net," Johnston said of extending the lead to two goals. "Luckily, it got high enough to go over the goalie's shoulder."

Fourth-year forward Johnston, 24, is the oldest Steve on the Saint Mary's roster, but he's just one of five.

In addition to Beyers and Shipley, both 22, there's also defenceman Stephen Gillard, 23, and forward Stephen MacAulay, 22, who are all in their second year of Huskies hockey.

"In practice, coach will be yelling 'Steve,' and the whole team's looking," Johnston said

Playoff series

The remaining game(s) between Saint Mary's and Moncton:

- Game 2 — Thursday at Moncton, 7 p.m.
- Game 3 — Saturday at Saint Mary's, 7 p.m. (if necessary) with a chuckle after the game.

So it's a good thing the guys mostly stick to last names, along with occasional nicknames, with Johnston often shortened to "Johnny."

Gillard goes by "Gilly," Shipley by "Shippy," MacAulay by "Bird" and Beyers, well, "he's sometimes called Scuba," — as in, "Scuba Steve."

While the Huskies share plenty of laughs off-ice, Johnston said they weren't satisfied with their on-ice performance Tuesday.

"I don't think it was our strongest effort," the Windsor Spitfires alumnus from Guelph, Ont., said. "But in playoffs, we'll take the win."

The Aigles Bleus created some solid scoring chances, including 15 shots in the third period alone, but Huskies goaltender Anthony Peters made 34 saves to hold onto the shutout.

"If we didn't have Petey back there, they could have come out of here with the win," Johnston said.

Peters said the win, not the shutout, "is the most important thing."

The fourth-year veteran agreed the Huskies will have to step it up to prevail over the Aigles Bleus.

"They played great tonight," Peters added of the Stevie-wonder line.

"Everyone's been hungry here going into the playoffs, and we've got to be ready for Game 2."

NHL. Habs ground Flyers with Desharnais' OT goal

David Desharnais scored in overtime to lead the Canadiens to a 2-1 victory over the visiting Philadelphia Flyers on Tuesday, extending Montreal's win streak to three games.

Tomas Plekanec scored for the Canadiens (35-15-3) in regulation time. Price stopped 23 of 24 shots for his 30th win of the season.

Matt Read scored for the Flyers (23-22-9). Ray Emery, who is replacing the injured Steve Mason, made 39 saves in defeat.

Desharnais scored the winner at 3:27 of overtime after scooping his own rebound over Emery's shoulder.

The win propelled Montreal to the top of the Eastern Conference. THE CANADIAN PRESS

2015 GMC Yukon

- Type. Four-door, seven- or eight-passenger full-size SUV
- Engines. 5.3-litre V8 (355 hp), 6.2-litre V8 (420)
- Transmissions. 6- or 8-speed automatic
- Price. $51,850 base, $64,900 as-tested

Market position

GM says that one out of every three full-size, truck-based SUVs sold in Canada is a Yukon or Denali. In this limited segment, only the domestics offer two wheelbase lengths or a choice of engines.

Points

- The eight-speed transmission in the Denali is expected to make its way to other Yukon models eventually.
- The Denali includes an air-levelling suspension system and Magnetic Ride Control, which almost instantly tightens or softens the ride to match road conditions.
- Alert system warns about forward traffic or lane departure by vibrating the seat.

The first two rows are roomy, but the third row is very cramped.

Interesting features

Rear-view camera, oil and transmission cooler, front and rear park assist, rain-sensing wipers and remote starter are all standard; heated and cooled seats, power-folding third-row seat, adaptive cruise control, a rear-seat entertainment system, and power liftgate are all optional.

JIL

Although the full-size SUV segment is not as large as it once was, the remaining players are as big as ever.

The all-new 2015 GMC Yukon is available in two "big and bigger" wheelbase lengths, and with seating for up to eight people.

It's based on the GMC Sierra pickup that was completely overhauled for 2014, although it doesn't share any of that truck's exterior panels.

The base SLE trim line and my tester, the SLT, use the Sierra's 5.3-litre V8 engine and come in two-wheel drive, or, as in my vehicle, four-wheel drive.

Pricing ranges from $51,850 to $64,900. You can also get a luxurious top-line Denali trim, which uses a 6.2-litre V8 and comes only as a 4x4, for $74,600.

My tester was the regular-wheelbase model, but you can also get the extended-length Yukon XL in all trim lines, which adds $3,050 to the price of each.

All Yukon models have three rows of seats, but the

The interior is as well-finished as you'd expect for the price, with simple controls.

XL gives you more legroom and extra cargo space behind the third row.

For all its size, the Yukon doesn't feel as big as it is when you're driving it, thanks to light steering and quick response.

The interior is as well-finished as you'd expect for the price, with simple controls that are easy to use.

The first and second rows are roomy, but the third row is perched over the rear axle and, as a result, there's very little room for your knees and the seating position isn't very comfortable.

Detroit electric sports car still at least a year away

Wannabe electric sports car manufacturer Detroit Electric has revealed its Lotus Evora-based SP:01 model in production trim, but says the vehicle won't be available until sometime in 2016, pending further testing. Production is set to take place in the United Kingdom, reports MotorAuthority, and the first models should roll off the production line later this year. Markets confirmed to date include the United States, Europe and Asia. Propulsion comes from a single electric motor rated at 285 horsepower with drive sent to the rear wheels only. Buyers can expect a zero-to-96 km/h time of 3.7 seconds, a top speed of 250 km/h and a driving range per charge of about 290 kilometres.

This is the production version of the Detroit Electric SP:01, but it's more than a year away.

Tiny Spira4u seeks global markets

Pilot production is underway in China for the electric- and gasoline-powered sub-subcompact Spira4u three-wheel urban vehicle, which marketers hope to bring to North America. Conceived as a low-cost (to make, own and operate) and hyper-economical vehicle, the Spira4u is an Automotive XPrize finalist and a cross between a car and a motorcycle. Its soft, honeycomb-composite structure protects up to two occupants in a collision, and the body from significant damage in parking lot fender-benders. The $6,200 gas-powered model delivers a top speed of 85 km/h and fuel efficiency of 2.9 L/100 km. The electric version reaches 100 km/h and goes 450 km per charge with one motor. A much faster two-motor model is also available.

The Spira4u is a bumper car that can shrug off light collisions. Made in China, the three-wheeler may be coming to North America soon.

Shift points

- Israeli company Storedot says it is a year away from marketing an electric-car battery that can be fully recharged in three minutes. If true and even remotely affordable, it would revolutionize the EV industry, putting it on equal refuel footing with gas engines.
- Johnson Controls says it has developed a small lithium-ion battery for use in vehicle stop-start systems, reports Automotive News. About the size of a tissue box and weighing just four kilograms, it can double current stop-start efficiency to eight per cent.
- Mazda says its 2016 MX-5 will be the first vehicle to incorporate parts made from a new bio-plastic it developed. The plastic is based on plant materials instead of petroleum, and does not require painting.

Hyundai's Tucson hydrogen-powered fuel-cell CUV coming soon to Canada

Hyundai says it will be the first automotive company to make hydrogen-fuel-cell electric vehicles available in Canada, and has launched a dedicated website to find the first Canadian customer. The Tucson fuel-cell electric will be available to customers on a three-year-lease, starting this spring in the Vancouver area. "We're planting the seed for a new segment of the industry," said Hyundai Canada CEO Don Romano. The challenge facing hydrogen-powered vehicles, he said, has been characterized by a chicken-and-egg scenario "where car companies won't bring fuel-cell vehicles to market without an infrastructure, and there is no need for a refuelling industry without customers." In fuel-cell vehicles, hydrogen is converted to electricity to power electric drive motors. A fill-up takes about five minutes.

Honda seeks energy efficiency from wind power

Honda has unveiled a wind farm in Brazil that generates enough electricity to meet the needs of its car-production plant in the state of Rio Grande do Sul, in southernmost Brazil. Honda says it is the first automaker to open a wind farm in that country, and expects the facility to generate all the electricity needed for its annual production, currently about 140,000 units, reports Green Car Reports. Honda has experimented with wind power before, installing turbines at its transmission plant in Ohio, although on a much smaller scale. The $47-million Brazil project is part of Honda's goal to cut its overall carbon-dioxide emissions by 30 per cent by 2020.

Kenguru EV hops on mobility bandwagon

Promising wheelchair-bound travellers a level of personal mobility never before possible, the first drive-from-wheelchair electric vehicle is under production in Pflugerville, Tex. The single-occupant Kenguru has a lone rear door that is operated by remote control, allowing the driver to wheel in, strap in, take control of the vehicle and, within seconds, be good to go. Designed more for urban areas than the open road, the 550-kilogram Hungarian-designed Kenguru is powered by two rear-axle electric motors, has a top speed of 50 km/h and a range of 70 to 110 kilometres per charge. It sells for about $31,000, before applying any electric-vehicle or mobility assistance funding that might be available in the buyer's jurisdiction.

Just drive in, lock down and drive off. Designed for drivers in a wheelchair, the Kenguru has a top speed of 50 km/h and a range of up to 110 km. It sells for about $31,000.

What test car is Garry bringing us this week? We literally have no clue what will roll into the driveway until it's here, but who are we to doubt Garry Sowerby, who has a bazillion Guinness records for around-the-world driving? That's a bazillion more than we have, after all. Come along and find out as we drive 'em, dirty 'em and shoot 'em with our phone cams. These are real-life, no-glam reviews.

Sporty and fun — all year round

Special delivery. You may look nuts driving it in the winter, but the Audi TT-S is even more fun on ice and snow, when grip is limited

We don't ask where world-record road-tripper Garry Sowerby has been since we saw him last, because it makes us jealous — and also so the authorities can't brainwash it out of us. It's safer for everyone, really.

But, for whatever reason, he always seems to bring me the coolest cars in the worst possible weather.

Case in point: Garry slides up in a shiny Imola Yellow Audi TT-S, and it has been the messiest and slipperiest stretch of crap weather we've had so far in this miserable winter.

I hate winter.

Can you tell?

But even normal people who are not Garry don't get why the TT is here, now.

"Do they not know where we live?" says a buddy from my gym who spies it in the parking lot.

I don't think Audi cares. The cars are made of metal, not sugar. It doesn't matter what time of year it is or what's under the tires.

My personal car is an Audi R8 and, with the right tires, it could be driven year-round, no problem.

So, while everyone else thinks Audi is nuts — and, by association, that I'm nuts for driving one in this weather — I don't care, either.

The Quattro all-wheel drive makes the TT-S formidable and fun in all seasons, especially in this icy junk, where the limits of grip are so

With the right tires, the Audi TT-S is formidable and fun in all seasons. It is not a summer-only car, nor should it be for a cost of $63,000. JEFF MELNYCHUK PHOTOS

With the rear seats folded, the hatch offers loads of cargo space.

The S has been at the top of the TT food chain since the raunchy, 360-horsepower RS exited the picture. But the TT-S is just as much fun.

The TT has a back seat, but it's not really designed for two humans.

High-lows

WOWS: A yellow sports car in the dead of winter has the effect of a defibrillator. Baseball stitching for the seats never gets old. Shockingly little tire gap with the fenders. Its mid-range power reminds us of the TT-RS. Perfect winter transport while Corvettes sleep.

HMMS: Back seat? Funny. No matter how you slice it, $63,000 is a lot o' cash for 265 hp and all-wheel drive. Silver exterior accents? Uh, no, subtle is better.

Quoted

"Yeah, a Corvette has more power for less money, and probably looks better. But you're not going to see one of those out in a blizzard."

dreadfully low. It's not a summer-only car, nor should it be for a cost of $63,000, plus tax.

Yeah, a Corvette has more power for less money, and it's a newer design and probably looks better.

But you're not going to see one of those out in a blizzard, are you? At least not right-side up. That means you'll need another vehicle for the winter, and some place to store the Corvette.

The TT-S needs no such winter pinch-hitter, just the right winter tires.

However, something like an Audi S4 sedan or S5 coupe would provide more room. The TT has a back seat, but it's probably better-suited for surprise store purchases than the seating of two humans.

The great part is how much cargo room there is in the hatch when the rear seat is folded flat. It's a narrow space, but it's long. Good for road trips or bringing home 2x4s. Really.

Unfortunately, even with winter tires, the TT-S is in a constant state of traction-control intervention on anything but dry roads, partly because the 265-horsepower, four-cylinder engine — which is exclusive to the TT-S — has plenty of mid-range turbo-charged torque to break the tires free.

The paddle-shift transmission feels like it's tied to my thoughts rather than my fingers and, at each gear change when the engine revs drop, there's a cute little "bll-laaaap" farting sound coming out the quad tailpipes.

I laugh. Often.

The S is at the top of the TT food chain, since the satisfyingly raunchy 360-horsepower RS is out of the picture. I have to say the TT-S is just as much fun, but the difference in low-speed power between the two is night and day.

Until the TT-S starts making some revs, the pedal is almost dead. It just won't launch hard. Base TT models have 211 horsepower, but the same peak torque as the TT-S.

There's a new TT coming for 2016 with more power and likely a higher price. Get yours with winter tires. It's fun.

World Car of the Year finalists announced

Awards. BMW 2-Series Active Tourer, Ford Mustang, Jeep Renegade and more in the running

The shortlist for one of the auto world's most coveted awards has been revealed ahead of the awards ceremony in New York this April.

The 10 finalists that will compete for the title of 2015 World Car of the Year are the BMW 2 Series Active Tourer, the Citroën C4 Cactus, the Ford Mustang, the Hyundai Genesis, the Jeep Renegade, the Mazda2, the Mercedes-Benz C-Class, the MINI 5 door / MINI 4 door, the Nissan Qashqai, and the Volkswagen Passat.

The winner will be chosen by a jury of 75 international motoring journalists who have put each of the cars through their paces and the prize awarded on Thursday, April 2 at the New York International

Auto Show.

For all categories except the Green Car award, the jury will simply vote for the winner via a secret ballot, whereas the winning green car will be selected in part by a panel of green technology experts who have set the final shortlist of candidates based on their environmentally friendly credentials.

The final five cars, which this year includes the BMW i8, Hyundai x35 / Tucson Fuel Cell, Kia Soul EV, Volvo

XC90 T8 Twin Engine, and the Volkswagen Golf GTE, will be tested and reviewed by the main panel of judges and a winner selected.

As well as the overall winner, prizes will also be given in a number of other categories including Luxury Car of the Year, Performance Car of the Year and Green Car of the Year.

BMW must be hopeful of its chances at this year's ceremony as it has models nominated in every category. AFP

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

Be more assertive about your opinions today, especially if you've kept your thoughts to yourself for a while. If you don't have to shout but let others know what you believe.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Others will go out of their way to keep you quiet today, because the truth is not what they want to hear. If you find yourself at odds with powerful people, don't back down.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Be careful who you trust on the work front today because someone you think is a friend could be plotting to undermine your position.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Now that Mercury, planet of the mind, is moving in your favour again you won't have much trouble working out what needs to be done. Get your financial affairs in order.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You will hear something to your advantage over the next 24 hours. Don't be reluctant to believe it just because the source of the information has not always been reliable.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Partnerships and relationships will be under important stars as the month moves on, so clear the decks for action now.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Your latest project will be a success, despite recent setbacks. Don't worry that you have not made as much progress as you would have liked. There is still plenty of time to get it right.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

You should find it easier now to get along with people who, for one reason or another, have been a bit stand-offish of late.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

If you get the chance to do a good deed for a friend over the next two or three days don't wait to be asked, just wade in and put things right for them.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Something that has been tormenting you these past few weeks will no longer seem such a problem after today. You will also be delighted to discover that you are not as poor financially as you thought.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Something that has gone wrong on several occasions over the past two or three weeks will start going right again as of today, which will lead to an improved outlook.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

You will learn something you find hard to believe today. It has been in plain sight for a while, which begs the question: How did you manage to miss it?
